

Letters to the people of Iran #3

May 8, 2004, 22:36

Masood Nazemzadeh

Historically, the presence of an evil force among a nation has led to the creation of chaos, intellectual corruption, and the total bankruptcy of moral values of that particular nation. Foreign invaders, in hope of achieving the total domination of minds, bodies, and the souls of the conquered, slowly begin to chip away at the very foundation of the values with which the people identify.

The nation's core beliefs and cultural traditions become the target of the invaders. These regimes, working as blood sucking parasites, invade the host bodies. In hope of achieving a cultural metamorphosis, they infect their minds and their souls and begin a process of transforming the society into one of their own. By offering lucrative position to the naive, they try to drive a wedge between the controlled and the none-believers. They thrive on creating uncertainties and blames, because they lack the moral foundation to rule.

Leaders of these nations, such as the Mullahs of Iran, present and the past, Khatami, Khamenei, and the biggest rodent, Rafsanjani himself are all weaved from the same thread, even though they have different physical appearances. One has a white cover on his head to help keep an occasional useful thought from escaping his brain, while the others use a black cover which supposedly symbolizes their lines of heritage directly to the root of this false religion which was founded in the perpetually corrupt sands of Saudi Arabia.

Khatami and his false promises were design to achieve exactly what has happened in Iran in the past few years. Cleverly, he comes across as a person who is doing all he can to establish freedom and democracy in a system which is corrupt to its core. A system which was brought about by he and others like him who claim to be the so called "reformers", reformers of what? How can one try to repair a political system which is based upon false premises and lacks moral justifications? How can the leaders of Iran, Rafsanjani in particular, explain and justify the billions of dollars which they have stolen from the Iranian treasury? Where did Rafsanjani's son find the money to purchase forty five acres of some of the most valuable real estate property north of Tehran? Did his father really make his billions when he was reading the last rights to the dead as they were being berried in Mashad's cemeteries during the Shah's regime?

Doesn't a moral leader such as the self-righteous Khatami have an obligation to stand up for the rights of the innocent in Iran? Wasn't he given a mandate to end the corruption and bring about changes in Iran, or was that just another one of thousands of lies promised by another Muslim Leader? Was he really stupid enough to believe that he can challenge Khamenei and his band of thugs? Did he really vision a time when he would be allowed to establish a democracy in a theocracy whose founder nearly fourteen centuries ago never respected the rights of the opposition? Did he forget so quickly how the founder of the Islamic Iran, through his best friend Ayatollah Khalkhali, demanded and received the heads of thousands of Iranians in the days following the so-called revolution? Does he really think for a moment that this murderous Arab conquering force, whose hat he so proudly wears, will ever find legitimacy to rule the children of Kurosh? Are we going to allow these barbaric people to whom Khatami pledgeshis allegiance once again destroy our culture and heritage as they did fourteen centuries ago?

Rise my friends, rise and regain your "God given rights as a proud nation" who was once a moral example for the whole world to follow. Recant the wise words of Zoroaster whose teaching became the bases of moral clarity for Judaism and Christianity. Become a proud Iranian nation and reject this barbaric people and their lies.

Until next time

Masood Nazemzadeh

Website: www.oyicm.org